Defendants.

In this medical malpractice action, an ex parte application was made to this Court for a Judicial Subpoena Duces Tecum. The Court declines to so-order the subpoena and returns it to the movant. This Court will not entertain or otherwise execute any document that contains a social security number (inclusive of a corporate identification number), particularly when accompanied by a date of birth or death, that would have the inevitable effect of making private information available to the public upon the Court's execution of the submitted document. The concern is no less compelling where, as in this case, the social security number is gratuitously provided and identifies a deceased individual.
